Learn to navigate our health-care system

By Jenn Watt

Those feeling confused about how the local health-care system are invited to attend a special information session on Tuesday, April 14.

Navigating the Health Care System will include presentations on the Family Health Team, Community Care Access Centre, Haliburton Highlands Health Services, Community Support Services and long-term care.

"In my experience, in all of the areas I serve folks don't understand how the agencies work together, period," said Sheri McKeen, community education and outreach representative for the local CCAC.

"I think there are so many access points [to health care] — that makes it confusing," she said.

McKeen will be presenting on the services her organization offers including visiting nursing, personal support, therapy (physio, occupational, social work, nutrition, speech-language).

The event is being organized by the Haliburton County Service Providers Network and McKeen said the group decided to offer the information session partially because of the changes in health-care services in the last 12 months.

Due to a provincially mandated integration process, several community services were reshuffled under the umbrella of Haliburton Highlands Health Services, which now includes a new department called Community Support Services.

"We thought it would be a great opportunity to highlight those changes and how people will navigate through the agencies," she said.

People should be aware of community supports before an illness or disability arises, she said. Often those in need don't know about what services are available to them when they need it.

Navigating the Health Care system takes place at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, April 14 at the Haliburton Legion and at 1:30 p.m. the same day at the Zion United Church in Carnarvon.

RSVP to Community Support Services at 705-457-2941. There will be snacks. Donations are appreciated, but not required.

Public library growth by the numbers

Bessie's Books and Other Things

Bessie Sullivan
Library CEO

As early as possible every year, I write an annual report about the activities and accomplishments of the Haliburton County Public Library the previous year. Writing this report gives me a chance to look back and analyze what worked, what didn't, where progress was made, and where we have to reassess our effectiveness. I also look at all the statistics gathered over the year and compare them to other years. We love statistics in the library world and we collect them both for interest and necessity. They are a necessity because we are required to report extensively to the Ministry of Culture in order to qualify for a rather significant operating grant. They are of interest because analyzing statistics is a great tool in helping to choose the path moving forward.

In 2014 the library had….

- …6,222 cardholders. (This number represents more than a third of the people in Haliburton County.)
- …circulated 147,649 items including 26,889 digital items. (These include ebooks and downloadable audiobooks. The digital circulations could mean that you didn't even have to leave your house to use the library. There is a significant spike in these numbers in bad weather.)
- …added 7,253 items to the collection. (This includes new purchases as well as very gently used donations.)
- …50,668 items on its shelves across eight branches.
- …245 programs that 4,373 people attended.
- …supported a Friends of the Library group of 136 members who raised $16,334 for enhancements to the library system.
- …54 formal and informal community partnerships allowing HCPL to be co-operative and efficient while offering a broader range of services.

Haliburton County is an interesting library microcosm as the inequalities amongst the population derive far less from economic situation and much more from being in a rural and remote area. People using library computers and Wifi may or may not own their own equipment, but are not as likely to have high speed connections as they are if they lived in a more urban area. People are more isolated in rural areas and rely on public spaces to alleviate the sense that they are alone.

Public libraries are the main players in contributing to the area's digital literacy. Digital literacy is not just about computers, but encompasses every way in which technology effects our everyday lives. Whether we like it or not, libraries have become the leaders in adaptation to technology. For example, because we offer ebooks, we have been forced to also be experts in the myriad of devices sold to access ebooks. Often we are scrambling to keep up as technology rapidly changes.

Although it is sometimes difficult to prove a public library's economic value to a community, there is clear indication that having a strong public library attracts newcomers, resulting in increased real estate sales. Our own surveys revealed that on days that the library is open, restaurants and stores are busier. A strong foundation for a community includes a skilled and knowledgeable workforce. The library supports this by supporting literacy in all its forms, including reading and digital literacy.

In small, isolated communities people need lots of reasons to spend the gas money to go into town. By looking at our numbers we continue to try to make all of HCPL's branches destinations of choice and strong contributors to the economic wellbeing of the area.

Earth Day forum to unite environment and economy

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust, in partnership with the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce, will be hosting a community forum on Earth Day. The forum aims to bring together like-minded people with an interest in the environment and economic development. Together, participants will take a local inventory of environmental products, services and programs, while identifying gaps and new business or program opportunities for the future.

"There are many groups in the Haliburton Highlands working hard to protect what is perhaps our most important asset – our natural environment," said Simon Payn, chairman of the communications and membership committee of the Land Trust. "So it makes sense for us to discuss how we can collaborate to better achieve our shared objectives."

Any business, organization or community group that has an interest in the local environment and economy is welcome to attend.

"The Chamber of Commerce is focused on improving our local economy, in collaboration with organizations like the Haliburton Highlands Land Trust and our local business community," said Rosemarie Jung, manager of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce. "Forums like this, that bring organizations and business together, have the potential to create exciting new partnerships that will benefit our local environment and the economy."

The forum will be facilitated by Jeff Kohl, a consultant with the Ontario Healthy Communities Coalition, and will take place on Wednesday, April 22 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Bonnie View Inn, 2713 Kashagawigamog Lake Rd. The event is free, and refreshments and lunch will be provided.

The event is made possible in part through funding from the Ontario Trillium Foundation, which is an agency of the Government of Ontario.

Bancroft area group finances TNR program

The Washington Post published in June 2007 a research entitled Cats Domesticated Themselves. "A genetic study of the origins of the domestic cat... indicates that tabbies, Persians and Siamese cats wandered into Near Eastern settlements at the dawn of agriculture — about 12,000 years ago. And their mission was food, not friendship."

Some cats are still feral – born in the wild and happy to stay there and catch their own food. Bancroft recently became home to a colony of 10 feral cats. The problem? One unspayed female cat and one unneutered male cat and their offspring can result in 420,000 kittens in seven years. A population explosion is not good for the Bancroft area where there are already too many unwanted cats. So Home Again financed a Trap-Neuter-Return (TNR) program for feral cats.

Several Canadian cities support feral colonies. The City of Toronto has a website devoted to TNR. The United States has more than 300 local governments who support the practice of TNR. The program reduces the colony's size humanely while allowing the cats to live the life they want, the life they were born into. Bancroft cats were live-trapped, vaccinated and spayed/neutered by local veterinaries and, after a recuperation period at a Home Again volunteer's home, released. It costs Home Again a lot of money and requires the help of many caring people. If you wish to help, please donate to Home Again by mailing a donation payable to "Home Again" to R.R. 1, L'Amable, Ont. K0L 2L0 or drop it off at Pet Valu on Station Street in Bancroft any Saturday from 10am to 3 p.m. You can also donate via PayPal or credit card on the website www.homeagainbancroft.ca . Donors will receive an income tax receipt.

Seniors programming gets federal dollars

Haliburton County initiatives received more than $87,000 to improve seniors programming and facilities across the region from the federal government.

Through the New Horizons for Seniors program, SIRCH Community Services, Wilberforce Heritage Guild, Abbey Gardens and the Haliburton Highlands Museum all received money.

The Safe At Home Project through SIRCH received just under $25,000 to provide 200 seniors in the county with home safety audits.

Money will go to a part-time co-ordinator, volunteer and staff travel and some equipment and repairs, SIRCH executive director Gena Robertson said.

The audits and case management will be done by trained volunteers. The project will help the seniors "develop a plan to access priority equipment and repairs to decrease their risk of falls or other injuries," the project summary reads.

Abbey Gardens in West Guilford received a little more than $13,000 for benches and trails, creating space on their property where people can walk with ease, executive director Heather Reid said. A small amount of the money will go to part-time staff, she said.

Additionally, Abbey Gardens is developing a seniors advisory committee. "The idea of the advisory committee is to invite interested individuals and organizations to the table to provide advice and direction related to new programs," Reid said. Anyone interested in being on the committee should contact Reid.

She said those who visit Abbey Gardens are already largely within the senior population, so improvements would directly benefit them as well as make the centre more appealing for new visitors.

The Wilberforce Heritage Guild received almost $25,000 "to encourage seniors to capture, promote and preserve the culture and heritage of Highlands East through collaboration between three volunteer heritage organizations," a press release from MP Barry Devolin's office reads.

The Haliburton Highlands Museum also received $25,000, which will be used to "allow seniors involved with the organization to plan and deliver programs such as community gardens and winter sports."

More than 13,000 projects across Canada have received New Horizons funding since 2006.

Kinmount to host Highland Games

By Darren Lum

A taste of Scotland is coming to Kinmount for the first time this summer.

The Kinmount Fairgrounds will present the first Kinmount Highland Games and Celtic Festival starting at 10 a.m. (rain or shine) on Saturday July 11. They will showcase the high pitched sounds of the bagpipes, the precise footwork of dancers and the display of brawn and technique during the heavy events.

Guy Scott, Highland Games committee member and spokesperson, believes Kinmount is the perfect fit for the games.

"The games will be great for Kinmount. We have such an under-utilized fairgrounds. To attract people you need to make your village a destination. This will be one more petal on the flower. For such a small village as Kinmount, we try to have the most unusual events, features. This will certainly help," he wrote in an email.

He said back in 1983, Kinmount hosted a successful Highland Tattoo – a Highland Games without the competitive events – at the fairgrounds to celebrate the Ontario bicentennial.

Scott said he isn't certain how things will go, but is confident there is great opportunity for success.

There has been a group of local residents who have always supported the idea to host a Highland Games.

A history buff, Scott said with a name like Kinmount having a Highland Games makes sense.

Kinmount House is the name of a 19th century Scottish country house and there is a reference to a famous poem, The Ballad of Kinmount Willie.

With the closest games in Sutton and Bracebridge, Kinmount is an ideal location when it comes to area communities of Peterborough, Haliburton and the Kawartha Lakes.

The terrain of the area, he adds, is also perfect for the Games.

"Thanks to the Kinmount Fair, the Games can be held in a true 'Scottish' setting of rolling hills, rocks and trees at the Kinmount Fairgrounds," he wrote.

Admission is for the games is $10.

It is followed by the Kinmount Moonlight Mania.

Scott's years of experience with helping organize the Kinmount Fair are an invaluable asset for the games.

"I have learned a lot of organizational skills from the fair and also how to utilize the physical grounds. The event is also a good chance to promote the Kinmount Fair. You can never have too many people," he wrote.

He adds there will be close to 100 Highland dancers from all over Ontario who will come to compete.

Scott hopes this event will be included as part of the Highland Games circuit of competition stops.

Held in Haliburton for years before it was cancelled the past few due to finances, the Highland Games is returning to the area because the committee has reorganized the event and new financing, Scott said.

Funding for the event is coming from sponsors such as the City of Kawartha Lakes from the Kinmount Planning and Economic Committee and the Kinmount Fair, including various local groups.

A lot of money, he said, was saved because of the fairgrounds' existing facilities.

Just like other games, there will be Scottish dancing, pipe bands, entertainment featuring various related acts, local artisans, a children's area, vendors and heavy events (caber toss, hammer throw). Specifics about who and how many will be announced closer to the event.

After the event, Scott wants spectators to be left with a memorable impression so they return the following year.

"The Highland Games are so different from other sporting/cultural events. They are unique. We want people to say they enjoyed the Games or had fun and would come back. It's easy to have good indoor events, but outdoor events ... it is something to be proud of," he wrote.

Give me shelter

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

April is here. So much so that most of us have had at least a few April showers – and perhaps even one April bath. If not, never fear, the rains of April are on their way.

Like most, I'm all for a gentle rain. Unfortunately, a gentle rain is typically defined as the one you are not walking in. That one is most often characterized as a torrent.

So how do you deal with these watery April occurrences? There are two ways: you either find shelter or wear a wet suit. Since wearing a wet suit is, for some reason, not considered fashionable these days, here are 10 ways to seek shelter in the rain.

1. Carry an umbrella that actually works: This, of course, is the least reliable of all the rain avoidance methods. You either do not have one at the time or – more likely – when you open it, the whole contraption takes flight after flapping three or four times and migrates south.
2. Use a newspaper. You know shock rocker Marilyn Manson? That's actually not make-up he is wearing. No, all that is the result of getting caught in a rainstorm while holding a newspaper over his head. Sure, the running ink caused a bit of mayhem with his otherwise wholesome look, but as you can see, he remained dry.
3. Stand under a tree. Only do this if there is not an electrical storm in progress. Otherwise, if lightning is striking, it is unsafe. More than that, Hydro One would probably find a way to add it to your monthly electrical bill.
4. Culverts. Standing in a culvert will not actually keep you dry – it will just change the direction in which you get wet. That being, basically from the feet up, rather than from the head down. This is fine if you just got your hair done. At least you will be able to enjoy the new do for a few minutes at least.
5. Stand under a park bench. Admittedly, this is advice for those of us who are vertically challenged. Having said that, it works great, provided you don't mind sharing the space with impatient pigeons.
6. Learn to dodge rain drops. Clearly this is not an easy thing to do, especially if you have decided to go for a prolonged walk in a deluge. I have mastered it, by use of a simple mental trick I think of every rain drop as that guy who has just caught a bragging sized fish in the lake you said was not worth fishing. When you think of them that way, they are much easier to dodge.
7. Awnings. Find the one storefront awning that is left in Ontario – don't ask me where it is – and stand under it for the duration of the storm.
8. Spend the entire storm under a bridge. Not only is this a great way to stay dry, it's also a fantastic way to get to know your local hobos like Slappy Bill and No Soles Sam.
9. Spend a great deal of time in the desert. This is one of the surest ways I know to avoid rain.
10. Carry a potted vegetable plant that desperately needs rain. If my past attempts at growing plants prove correct, somehow the rain will find a way to avoid you.

You've seen the Gryphon Trio on our stage before: refined, exciting playing of traditional and comtemporary music. The Elmer Iseler Singers: vivid and emotional interpretations of choral music. Robert Kortgaard and Peter Tiefenbach make musical magic as four hands dash across the keyboard, threatening to get impossibly tangled!

Three entirely different musical presentations, but each reminding us why nothing compares with live performances of important and profoundly moving music.

Tax Tips For Families With Children

■ Child Amount: Families will benefit from a $2,255 child amount for each child under the age of 18 for the last time in 2014. This will result in a federal tax saving of $338 per child. And if one parent cannot use the entire amount to lower their tax payable, the unused amount can be transferred to a spouse or common-law partner.

■ Artistic Credit: The Children's Arts Credit is another non-refundable credit worth up to $500 for children under the age of 16 enrolled in an eligible program. This could include language classes, Girl Guides or Scouts, art classes or ballet lessons. Again, keep your receipts to make the claim.

■ Family Tax Cut: For families where one spouse earns more than the other and have at least one child, they may transfer up to $50,000 in taxable income to help reduce their family tax liability. The maximum claim is $2,000.

■ Save for Future Education: Designed to help save for a child's post-secondary education, parents can make up to $50,000 RESP lifetime contribution. Canada Education Savings Grant (CESG) per year is $500.

■ Credit for Being Active: The Children's Fitness Amount is a non-refund-able credit is worth up to $1,000 for children under the age of 16 enrolled in an eligible program of physical activity. Not every program meets the eligibility guidelines so you need to ensure you know the requirements. Make sure you keep your receipts. Disabled children will also qualify for the credit if they are under 18.

■ Universal Child Care Benefit: This is available to any family with children regardless of their household income. It used to be available only for children under the age of six. However, effective January 2015, a new $60 per month component will be paid for children over five and under 18. The component for children under six will also be increased from $100 to $160 per month. Parents will receive a retroactive payment in July 2015 for the enhanced amounts for the first six months of the year UCCB is taxable in the hands of the lower-income spouse.

■ Canada Learning Bond: To help lower income families, the Government provides $500 in a CLB at birth for children whose families are entitled to the National Child Benefit Supplement. As long as the family is still entitled to the supplement, they will receive an additional $100 CLB each year until the age of 15.

Trained and trusted, we ensure you get the most out of your taxes.
